

RECIPROCITY

The Idaho Pesticide and Chemigation Law allow the Idaho State Department of Agriculture to issue a Professional Applicator or Private Applicator (RU only in Montana, Utah, and Wyoming; RU and SF only possible in Oregon and Washington) license to an applicator that has tested and currently holds a similar license in another state. Only a non-resident of Idaho, who has tested and currently maintains the equivalent pesticide applicator license from one of the reciprocal states, qualifies for a Reciprocal License.

Idaho has reciprocal agreements with the following states:

- Montana
- Oregon
- Utah
- Washington
- Wyoming

To obtain a Reciprocal License in Idaho, an individual must:

1. Complete an ISDA license application
2. Submit Proof of Reciprocal License Status and Categories
 - Residents of all the above states, except for Washington, must contact their home state to request a Letter of Good Standing to be sent to ISDA, Applicator Licensing Office. Washington license holders need to send a printout of their current license status from WSDA's website.
 - Aerial Applicators must also provide a copy of their valid FAA Pilot's License and current medical card.
3. Provide proof of financial responsibility (for Professional Applicator License Only); on the ISDA Professional Applicator Certificate of Insurance form and
4. Pay the appropriate license fees

Disqualifiers:

1. Idaho will NOT issue a Reciprocal License if the other state's license is set to expire within 30 days, or has already expired. The license will need to be renewed first.
2. Idaho does not reciprocate the Chemigation category, and applicators will have to take the Idaho exam to perform such applications.
3. If the reciprocal state notifies Idaho of recent/pending license violations or insufficient testing, Idaho may refuse to issue a license or category.

To obtain a Reciprocal License in one of the Reciprocal States, an individual must:

1. Complete the "Letter of Good Standing Request" posted on the Licensing website, or contact the Licensing office at (208) 332-8600.
